is too much risk in it—our profits are too close.

We sell goods on credit at prices which were meant only for cash selling. But it has been our experience that credit to a responsible person is just about the same as cash—it's pretty sure money.

We could sell goods to anybody indiscriminately as the installment houses do, but we would have to charge more—as they do—in order to fortify ourselves against the failure to collect the many bad debts incident on such dealing.

We prefer to deal with people of responsibility and to quote them the lowsponsibility and to quote them the low-est prices possible, with the full expecta-tion that they will pay every cent they tion that they will pay every cent they owe.

In this system of ours we can't be bothered with notes or other legal ratterap or interest—you must not expect it of us. We give you the credit simply as an accommodation, relying on your word as your bond.

Our stock of household furniture was never so extensive as now—never so exquisite in colorings, designs and shapes before—and although it's saying a good deal—never so cheap as now. As much of it as you want is yours on credit—if

The controversy out of which the present proceedings grew precipitated a conflict between state and federal authorities, which at one time took on a very serious phase, but the shedding of blood was averted. The circumstances briefly were these:

The Richmond and Danville railroad was in the hands of receivers appointed by the United States court; certain county officials in their effort to collect state taxes seized the property of the railroads, stopping trains in some cases.

THE HOUSE LEASED BY MR. CLEVELAND

MR. CLEVELAND'S COUNTRY HOME. Fine Old Mansion on the Woodley Road Now Being Made Ready for Him. The President and Mirs. Cleveland are going

have a home in the country as they did four rears ago. By the end of the present month it expected that the Middleton House on the Voodley Lane road will be ready for their occupancy. An army of workmen are now engaged in refitting the house and in getting the entire place in readiness for the distinguished tenants. Mr. Cleveland has leased the place for a term of years and has not bought it. It is now the property of Mr. Francis G. Newlands, who was recently elected a member of the House from Nevada. Several member of the House from Nevada. Several years ago Mr. Newlands bought the place from Mrs. Kate M. Henderson, the wife of Chief Engineer Henderson of the navy. It is better known as the Middleton place.

The house is a large old-fashioned structure, roomy, comfortable and occupying an ideal location. It is nearer the city than Oak View, which was the home of the President during his former administration. Situated on the extended view, not only of the rolling country to the north, perhaps the most striking and picturesque section of the famous Rock Creek region, but from the windows there is one of the most charming and extensive views of the city to be found in this vicinity. A driveway leads up to the house from the road, winding along under the spreading branches of the great forest trees, with stretches of lawn on both sides, and ending at the house with its generous entrance and air of home comfort and rest. The house was built in the days when more care and time was given to construction than is now apt to be the case. The solid old walls of brick rest on stone foundations. The exterior walls are plastered or stuccoed and form the plain, honest framework of a home which is intended to be comor stuccoed and form the plain, honest framework of a home which is intended to be comfortable. The frontage is quite 100 feet and the rooms are of large and ample proportions. There is a spacious music room and the dining room is large enough almost for a state dinner. The plumbing of the house is being renewed, and a system of steam heating is being put in. The grounds will be put in order, and as far as a handsome appearance goes the President need not be ashamed of his home in the country. In every way the house is larger than the one at Oak View. There are some thirty acres of land about the house and if Mr. Cleveland is inclined to agricultural pursuits he can have ample swing for his fancy in this direction. Last summer the house was bard, the house stands on an elevated knoll, sur-rounded with fine old oak trees. It is some distance back from the road and commands an

THE APPOINTED SENATORS. Mr. Vest Makes an Extended Argument Against Their Being Seated.

No new morning business being introdued the Senate resumed consideration of the report of the committee on privileges and elec- guilty to a charge of perjury, alleged to have

A DECISION BOTH WAYS. It was an acknowledged fact, however, that the Senate had decided the question in both reinstated and again recalled, and on his ar-rival he said he had been "on a spree, worried to death from domestic affairs and had as lief commit suicide as anything else," &c. ways. The first case had come up in 1793 from ways. The first case had come up in 1793 from the state of Delaware and had been decided in favor of the position which he assumed today—that the governor had no right to fill an original term of a Senator by appointment. The next case had come up in 1801 and had been passed upon sub silentio—the decision being that the governor had the right.

Nine cases had been decided between 1801 and 1825—every one of them without debate; but in 1825 a case had come up and had been debated for three days—the result being that the Senate deliberately determined that a governor had been decided between the identity of the prisoner was made.

debated for three days—the result being that the Senate deliberately determined that a governor did not have the right to fill an original term of a Senator by appointment. In other words, that the great original and primary power of electing Senators is vested in the legislatures of the respective states. In the course of his argument, Mr. Vest having remarked that Mr. Pugh had thought differently in 1885, when he voted for the construction which he (Mr. Vest) was now contending for, Mr. Pugh excused his vote at that time by saying that he had followed his friend from Missouri in the mazes of his constitutional and metaphysical abstractions, in which they had both got lost; but that on reflection he had convinced himself that two add two do make four. There was another (said Mr. Vest) of the miraculous conversions, but he feared that the authority which had changed the miraculous conversions, but he feared that the authority which had gehanged the miraculous conversions, but he feared that the authority which had gehanged the miraculous conversions, but he feared that the authority which had gehanged the miraculous conversions, but he feared that the authority which had gehanged the miraculous conversions, but he feared that the authority which had gehanged the miraculous conversions, but he feared that the authority which had gehanged the miraculous conversions, but he feared that the authority which had gehanged the miraculous conversions, but he feared that the authority which had gehanged the miraculous conversions, but he feared that the authority which had gehanged the miraculous conversions, but he feared that the authority which had gehanged the miraculous conversions, but he feared that the authority which had gehanged the miraculous conversions, but he feared that the authority which had changed the miraculous conversions, but he feared that the authority which had changed the miraculous conversions, but he feared that the authority which had changed the miraculous conversions to the feared that the versions, but he feared that the authority which had changed the mind of the Senator which had changed the mind of the Senator from Alabama was not the same that had operated on St. Paul. [Laughter.]

If the Senator from Alabama had got lost in 1885 it had taken him till 1893 to find that he was lost. Anybody who took the ground contended for by the Senator from Alabama would have no difficulty in believing in the construction that was originally put on the "general welfare" clause of the Constitution that Congress could do anything. In order to come to the construction contended for on the other side Senators would have to be satisfied that Mr. Madison and his colleagues were guilty of Mr. Madison and his colleagues were guilty of gross negligence by putting in the Constitution the unnecessary words "by resignation or other-

Mr. Vest quoted from the debate in the Senate in the case of Mr. Wadleigh (N.H.), in which Mr. Dawes (the colleague of Mr. Hoar) said: "Every precedent in the Senate is against the power of the governor to appoint to a full term," and in which Mr. Blaine said: "Of term," and in which Mr. Blaine said: "Of course the governor cannot appoint. Nothing is better settled than that."

For more than fifty years, said Mr. Vest, no Senator ever made any such contention as that the governor could do that—never until 1879.

At the close of Mr. Vest's speech, Mr. Chandler, republicant of the formula of the county of the co ler, republican, obtained the floor, but yielded for an executive session, and the Senate accordingly, at 1:15 p.m., proceeded to the consideration of executive business and soon afterward adjourned till tomorrow.

A CONFLICT OF AUTHORITY.

Argument Heard in the South Carolina Railroad Tax Cases. What are known as the South Carolina railroad tax cases occupied the time and attention of the Supreme Court of the United States today. They came upon petition for writ of habeas corpus in behalf of three county sheriffs who are constructively in jail by order of Judge Simonton of the United States court in South Carolina—W. W. Risgr, M. V. Tyler and M. B. Gaines.

The controversy out of which the present effort to collect state taxes seized the property of the railroads, stopping trains in some cases. The sheriffs engaged in this work were ordered by the United States court to release the property, but several of them ignored the mandate of the court. They were then brought before the court, charged with contempt in failing to obey its orders. All but Messra. Riser, Tyler and Gaines purged themselves of the contempt. They petitioned for release on writs of habeas corpus and the rule was made returnable to-day. The controversy includes several important

The controversy includes several important questions of federal and state jurisdiction over property subject to local taxation, but operating under orders from a United States court. Because of the importance of the case the court gave each side two hours for argument instead of one, the usual limit, which exhausted the entire sitting of the day. For the petitioners nominally, but really for the state authorities, argument was made by Ira B. Jones and J. Randolph Tucker of Virginia, and for the receivers of the railroad and to sustain the authorities of the federal court, Hugh L. Bond, jr., attorney of the Richmond and Danville railroad, and Mr. Joseph W. Barnwell.

CHARGED WITH PERJURY. George W. Wayson is Arraigned and Plead Not Guilty.

George W. Wayson was arraigned today in the Criminal Court, Justice Cox, and plead not port of the committee on privileges and elections in favor of the admission of the Senators appointed by the governors of the states of Montana, Washington and Wyoming—the legislatures having failed to elect.

Mr. Vest (Mo.) made an argument against the admission of the three Senators. Great stress had been laid, he said, by the Senators from Massachusetts and Alabama (Hoar and Pugh) on the fact that the question was resaigluidicata. The doctrine of stare decisis was adjudicata. The doctrine of stare decisis was invoked as absolutely conclusive. If that were true, it would be, as a matter of course, an end Mr. Vest (Mo.) made an argument against a admission of the three Senators. Great stress had been laid, he said, by the Senators from Massachusetts and Alabama (Hoar and Pugh) on the fact that the question was resadjudicata. The doctrine of stare decisis was invoked as absolutely conclusive. If that were true, it would be, as a matter of course, an end of the controversy, but he denied it. He denied that the doctrine of stare decisis applied to the decisions of the Senate except when the Senate was sitting as a high court of impeachment.

When it was learned that the woman was the wife of Chief Clerk McOmber, Inspector Hollinberger thought the woman must certainly be a kleptomaniae, and later developments proved that the woman's mind was probably affected.

Chief Drummond of the secret service visited headquarters and saw Inspector Hollinberger. He told of the respectability of the family, but was not apparently much surprised that she had got herself into trouble.

Through him Inspector Hollinberger learned that the unfortunate woman lost two children about two years ago. that the unfortunate woman lost two children about two years ago. While one child was lying dead in the house the second child died in her arms. This trouble, it is thought, had a bad effect on her mind and since then it is stated she has attempted suicide. An effort was made to get her into an asylum, but her husband was unable to accomplish this on account of the opinions of the physicians.

After hearing of the woman's troubles and afflictions Inspector Hollinberger permitted her to go home with the understanding that she will appear in court tomorrow.

Yesterday's shipment was the largest made for several weeks, and all of it was drawn from the New York subtreasury. In the ordinary course of business the New York subtreasury gained $300,000 in gold, so the net loss by yesterday's shipment was $1,200,000. This gold, it is generally understood, is taken for Austrian consumption. That country when gold, it is generally understood, is taken for Austrian consumption. That country when she decided to go on a gold basis needed $200.000.000 in gold. She has obtained $130.000.000 and is a standing customer in the market for $70,000,000 more. She is gradually getting this at her leisure wherever she can procure it the easiest and cheapest. When the rate of exchange is favorable the other circumstances are usually such that this gold can be had in New York better than elsewhere.

No opinion is ventured as to when this gold output will stop, but treasury officials do not hesitate to express the opinion that the government will be able to meet all ordinary gold demands. The margin at present is sufficiently strong to prevent even the idea being entertained that the gold reserve is in danger. fitty-nine years.

Pawned the Diamonds Here.

Frank Adams, a young man of Boston, Mass., arrested at Omaha, Neb., on the charge of the grand larceny of $1,500 worth of jewelry from Meador & Co. of Boston, arrived here yesterday in charge of Inspectors Leggett and Gled-den. It is alleged that Adams was canvassing den. It is alleged that Adams was canvassing Boston for advertisements, and while soliciting one from Meador & Co. suggested that he could sell jewelry for them and arranged for a commission. The next day he returned with orders for about $1,500 worth of diamond settings, &c., and it is alleged that he pawned some there, came here and pawned some with Fulton & Co. He then went to Omaha, where his arrest was secured through the inspectors. They made a stop over here with the prisoner, he having told them of the disposition of the jewelry. Yesterday, with Detective Wesdon, they recovered $200 worth of the property from Fulton & Co. They left with the prisoner last night.
